CZECHOSLOVALIA

Through the forest of Czechoslovakia,
Across fields of oats and grain,
To a little peasant's cottage,
Our thoughts revert again.

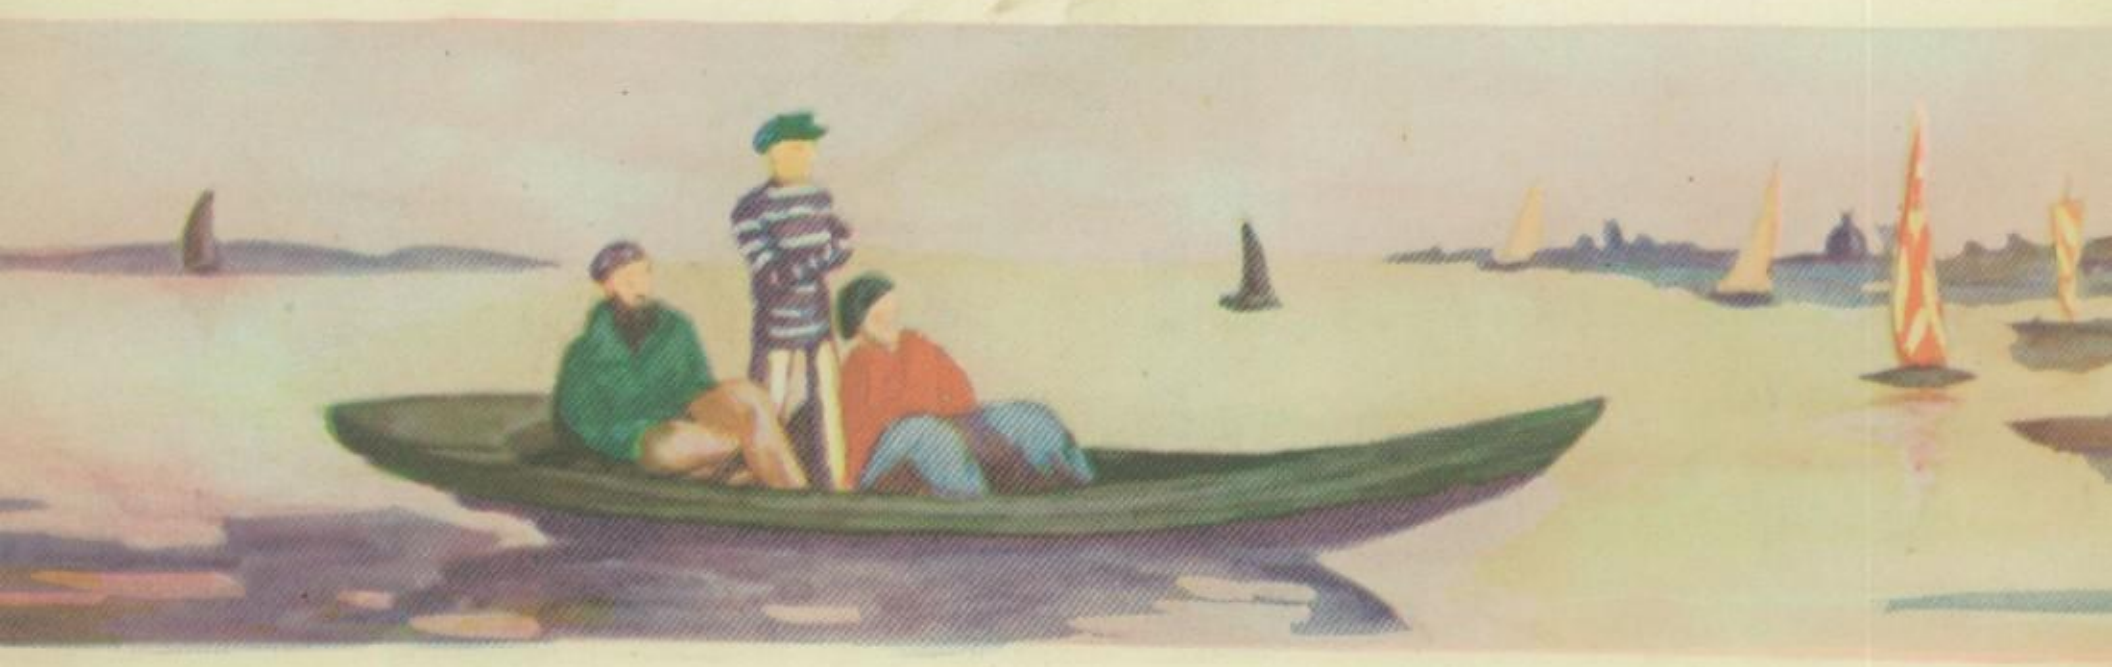
Here all who are strong and hearty
Labor patiently, day by day,
While the clever hands of women
Smock with colors drab and gay.

—G. B. L.

TO THE FACULTY OF AUSTIN HIGH SCHOOL

With desire for law and knowledge,
With endurance that nothing can quail,
Gallantly you are giving your best
That the youth which you serve may not fail.

—G. B. L.



ITALY

In the kingdom of Italy "the Eternal"
Crumbling structures tell of past gains,
But in the hearts of her children
Love for knowledge and law still remains.

Here the towering cliffs of Termosine
Slope down to a lake of blue,
And the Ponale road goes winding
Up to skies of azure hue.

—G. B. L.

MISS FRANCES MARTIN, MISS LOIS THRASHER, MISS NINA HILL

TO THE GRADUATES:

A story is told of an elderly man who started out with a small child for a walk, and, with an air of uncertainty said to the child, "Which way shall we go?" The child replied quickly, "Where do you want to go?"

Because of your youth, few of you, if asked that question in regard to your walk through life, could give other than a vague reply. Usually it is unwise to decide too early on your goal in life, on what you desire to accomplish, or, in other words, on "Where you want to go." But it is never too early to decide that you want to go somewhere; that you will not drift, and that you will take advantage of every opportunity to prepare yourself to attain your goal, once you have determined upon it.

Perhaps at no time in history has our nation stood in greater need of men and women of such caliber as the boys and girls in this class give promise of becoming. The world is deserting many of the old paths, and blazing new ones of heretofore undreamed-of possibilities. Whither are we bound? Whether into shifting sands of an endless desert, or boundless fields of industrial peace, justice and happiness depend largely upon two things: first, upon the response of educated, fearless, intelligent, Christian men and women to the insistent call for leadership; second, upon what is almost equally essential, the active, honest and informed participation in public affairs by those who cannot be, or do not care to be, in the lead.

With the inspiration of your high school training behind you, may you soon decide upon your purpose in life, and go forward along paths that will leave this world a better place because you have "passed this way."

Sincerely,

A. N. McCallum

TO THE STUDENTS OF AUSTIN HIGH SCHOOL:

The pages of another year lie before us. Each presents many faces, varied interests, and diverse achievements. The picture is one of a cosmopolitan high school serving your needs against the background of many national heritages, differing opportunities, and multiplied ambitions.

And yet, emerging with this diversity of aptitudes and desires, we expect each of you to become, through the unifying influence of common endeavor, fundamental training, and social contacts, an individual of character and vision able to use your differing talents for the betterment of a more complex social order.

In so far as we have been able to attain this end in your development, it has been a pleasant and an interesting task.

Geo. H. Wells.

CHINA

Ancient land of mystery,
Great wisdom you hold in store.
Thy "Book of Odes" reveals to us
Mighty deeds of yore.

Temple bells are flinging out
Their voices across the sea
Through a haze of drifting incense
You remain a mystery.

—G. B. L.

TO THE STUDENTS OF AUSTIN HIGH SCHOOL

In the mortar of our school life
Is the element of strength which may,
Mixed with the love of beauty,
Form the finer youth of to-day.

—G. B. L.

AMERICA

The loom of Time is weaving
A tapestry fair to see,
Depicting in its pattern
What American youth shall be

This marvelous piece of tapestry
Is strong and bright and gay,
For the warp is the wisdom of the ancient world,
The woof, the progress of to-day.

GOLDEN R

READER'S CLUB

Sponsor: HARRISON

The Reader's Club, sponsored by Miss Alice S. Harrison, is unique in Austin High School, because of the lack of organization, officers, and meetings. The Golden R is presented by the library as an honor to students who have completed satisfactorily a prescribed course of reading.

SCHOOL YEAR

GREECE

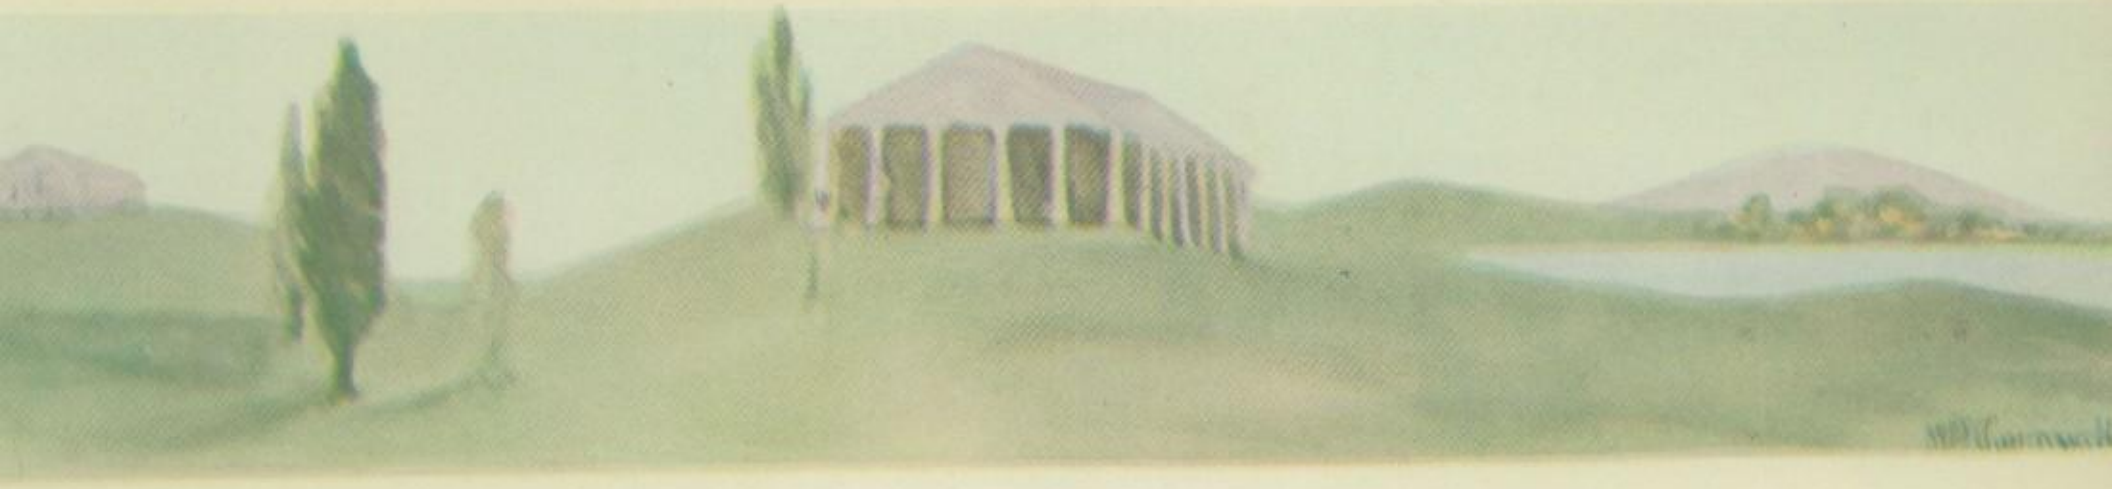
The conquering Romans gave us
Copies of Grecian art.
The love of all things beautiful
Made Greece a land apart.

Here Mount Olympus is towering,
Looking ever to the sea,
As the mythical home of the gods,
Famed it shall ever be.

—G. B. L.

TO THE SCHOOL

Exceeding the usual requirements,
Some win honor and fame.
All students show well trained talent,
Our school year has been one of great gain.



SWEDEN

On a rugged cliff is a castle,
A fisherman's hut on the shore,
A farm, a house in the valley,
With a century-old tree by the door.

Here in the frozen northland
Lives a race that is brave and bold,
And the legends of the Vikings
Are oft to their children retold.

—G. B. L.

NON-ATHLETIC INTRAMURAL ACTIVITIES

The Intramural Speech Arts Contest was begun in the session of 1931-1932 under the auspices of the Student Council for the purpose of promoting participation in declamation, debate, and extempore speech by students who might not necessarily be interested in interscholastic activity. Entrants may be club members or independent students. Each event is in charge of a faculty member who conducts elimination contests and then presents the final trial in assembly. Medals are given to the winners of first place and honorable mention to the winners of second place. The intramural contest serves to discover and develop talent for interscholastic events.

In your famous capital city,
Where music and art hold full sway,
There are rare foods, perfumes, and fashions,
Here all the world meets to be gay.

In a nearby forest of shadows
Where once wandered a mighty king,
Come wild deer to drink at evening
From the rim of a fern-decked spring.

Forever tribes are forming,
And ever friends must meet,

SYRIA

Long ago "the city of Asure"
Crept slowly o'er the white and burning sand,
As gradually spread the Turanian tribe
O'er this, a barren and far-distant land.

Today a city creeps across the sands
Containing wealth for which a king might sigh,
And camels carry bales of hand-made things
That hold the colors of the sun-shot sky.

THE MASTERPIECE

Above, the sky is studded everywhere
With stardust inconceivable; for in
The heavens rest a million precious stones
Which sparkle in a cloth of velvet blue,
And in such number to appear as grains
Of sand upon the beach. Yet every point
That comes into my vision represents
A space so great that all our world might in
Its boundaries be included. Wherefore, how Minute am I? The magnitude of those
Vague shapes defies ambition, leading on
To triumph—I am as a particle
Of dust when viewed before this vast expanse
Of matter. Likewise, if I turn my thoughts
To objects close at hand, no comfort do
I find. For in the spring, bleak Winter's dress
Is left behind, and trees and flowers clothe
Themselves in garb of richest hue, so that
My beauty cannot rival even for
An instant that of my surroundings. I
Am like an ugly crone when viewed beside
The handiwork of Nature. Why do I
Exist? And yet I know that that Great Will
Which put into its place each star above,
And fashioned every rose and lily by
My side reserves for me a place in this,
His Universe, and as I ponder still,
I see that I possess what none of these
Great works about me boast; that I am made
To be alive, to breathe and move; that I
Advance and prosper, overcoming that
Which must remain forever fixed. I see
That I am master over that which I
Survey: I climb the highest tree, traverse
The widest plain. I conquer, overthrow.
I cannot be defeated, near at hand
Or far away, by simple matter which
Surrounds me. I, who live and breathe and see,
Am not as one of these mere shapes which must Remain forever still, and cannot think
Or reason. Truly I, who master all
Of these, was made, by Him who creates all,
To be a Masterpiece.

TOM LAW

MY HOBBIES

I have two hobbies: one, the study of the universe too large for mortal comprehension; and the other, the creation of a miniature world where I alone am absolute. Here, I am a ruler among subjects of my own making, puppets whose destiny is in my own hands. I pull a string, and they walk; I go and they are lifeless and still: and when I become inflated with the magnitude of my power in this little world, I turn and stand a minute atom before a display of planets, the very immensity of which is too great for the feeble scope of my conception. In short, my hobbies are marionettes and astronomy.

A marionette is an ungainly creature with a stuffed cloth body clad in pilfered treasures of varied description. It is moved by strings attached to a wooden control. Its antics are never graceful, never smooth, never natural, often weird and impossible, but, oh, it moves! It leaps; it dances; it speaks. The marionette, object of my tyranny, grovels in abject poverty and rags, or revels in cardboard luxury and splendor as my wishes dictate. It is a constant trial and source of apprehension. Its strings become tied in knots, the complexity and strength of which would put the most experienced sailor to shame; its limbs become detached at the most crucial moments in its career. The very stage on which it lives its short life is its confederate, collapsing either in part or as a whole at the times when interest in the show is most intense. But these things are paltry, insignificant, not to the audience, perhaps, but to me, beside the delightful illusion that the bit of cotton for one brief moment really lives!

Toward astronomy, my attitude is a great deal like that of most people, I think. I know the thing to be true without ever believing it, if such is possible. I know that the sun is the center of our solar system and that the planets revolve around it; I know that there are many such suns distributed about a limitless universe. But in my mind's eye I see the sun as it makes its daily revolution; I see the stars all equidistant arranged in patterns to represent the dogs of Orion or some lamentable maiden chained to a rock. Because the fallacy is more comfortable fitted to the imagination, I derive a great deal of pleasure from locating these mythical inhabitants of the heavens and collecting the ancient tales of their origins and fate. The flying steed, Pegasus, the sour crab, the magic lyre, the brave hunter;—slowly they file across the sky each night. They are a gigantic puzzle to challenge the quick eye and memory.

But for true ecstasy one returns to cold facts; one becomes again the scientist. One should merely gaze into the great silent spaces and meditate on their very size. One should measure the white-hot stars in terms of light years, and weigh the planets in thousand ton units. One should fathom the mystery of the equinox and picture space without an end;—and then one should stop and let the stars slip back in place, equidistant and in a pattern. Mark Twain has said that these things, too, are an illusion.

FOOTBALL

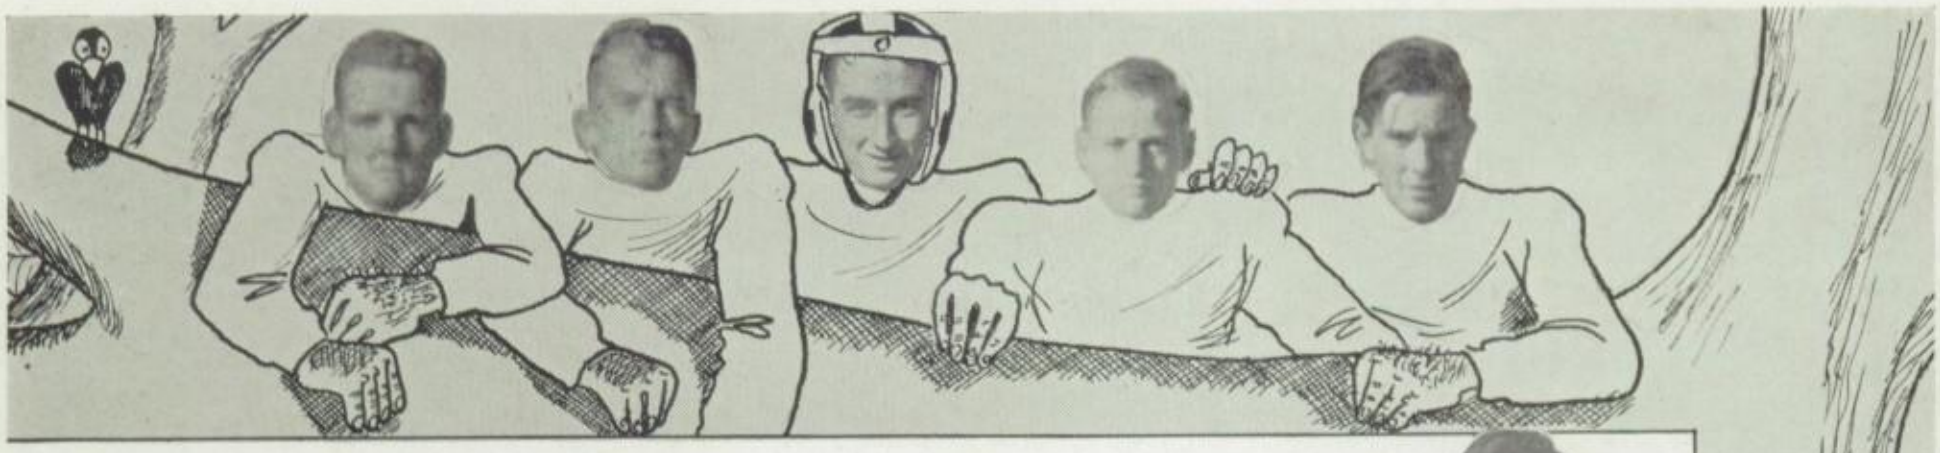
Last in victory but first in spirit—the 1933 Austin High Maroons met with the most disastrous chapter ever recorded in the annals of their football history.

At the start of the season some eighty men reported for training. The veteran coach, Bennie Strickland, had a tough job to perform, for not a single letterman returned. Besides a handful of reserves, inexperienced men were the only material at hand. After days and days of incessant drill, the Austin High mentor and his staff produced a machine that seemed as good as any district contenders.

In their first game of the season the Maroons silenced the roar of the Lockhart Lions as they fought their way to a well-earned 13 to 6 victory, but even at that, there was still plenty of room for improvement.

In this game C. J. Niederauer, a speedy halfback, forced himself into the public eye. Coach Strickland found in this young lad a reliable pass snatcher and a good plunger. His good defensive work throughout the remainder of the season was also a great help to the Maroons, and it saved them from many disastrous situations. Hiram Elliott, diminutive quarterback, piloted the Maroons well. Elliott played his first real game, and as fate would have it, he was injured.

ESTIL MEACHAM
"He came, he saw, he conquered."



The following week a bombshell hit the Maroon ranks when the Taylor Ducks waded into House Park and caught the Crimson-clad boys off their guard, for they were defeated by a 6 to 7 score.

Buddy Boggs, co-captain and fullback, and Murray Smith at center, led the Maroon attack against the Ducks. The elusive Boggs, playing against his former teammates, was the chief ball lugger for the Redboys. Throughout the entire season the Maroon offensive was directed around this bruising lad at the keynote position.

Smith, a reserve letterman, started the season at the pivot post, but he was later shifted to the backfield. He was an excellent punter and a good blocker. Sterling Wilkerson handled Smith's position at center for the rest of the schedule.

Next, the Maroons resumed with the Temple Wildcats their intersectional rivalry that dates back many years. Fighting against a scoring power-house, the Maroons bowed before the Wildcats to a tune of a 59 to 6 score. The entire Maroon squad had never experienced such terrific football warfare.

Scott Cater, shifty halfback, limped out of the Wildcat fray with a broken collarbone, and later proved to be a great loss to Austin High.

With a bracket of new plays and a revamped backfield, the Maroons engaged the Waco Tigers in a final test before the start of their district campaign. Harry Williams, halfback, did some good defensive work against the invading Bengals. But his good work and the efforts of the rest of the squad were not enough to stop the Tigers from rolling up a score of 31 to 6.

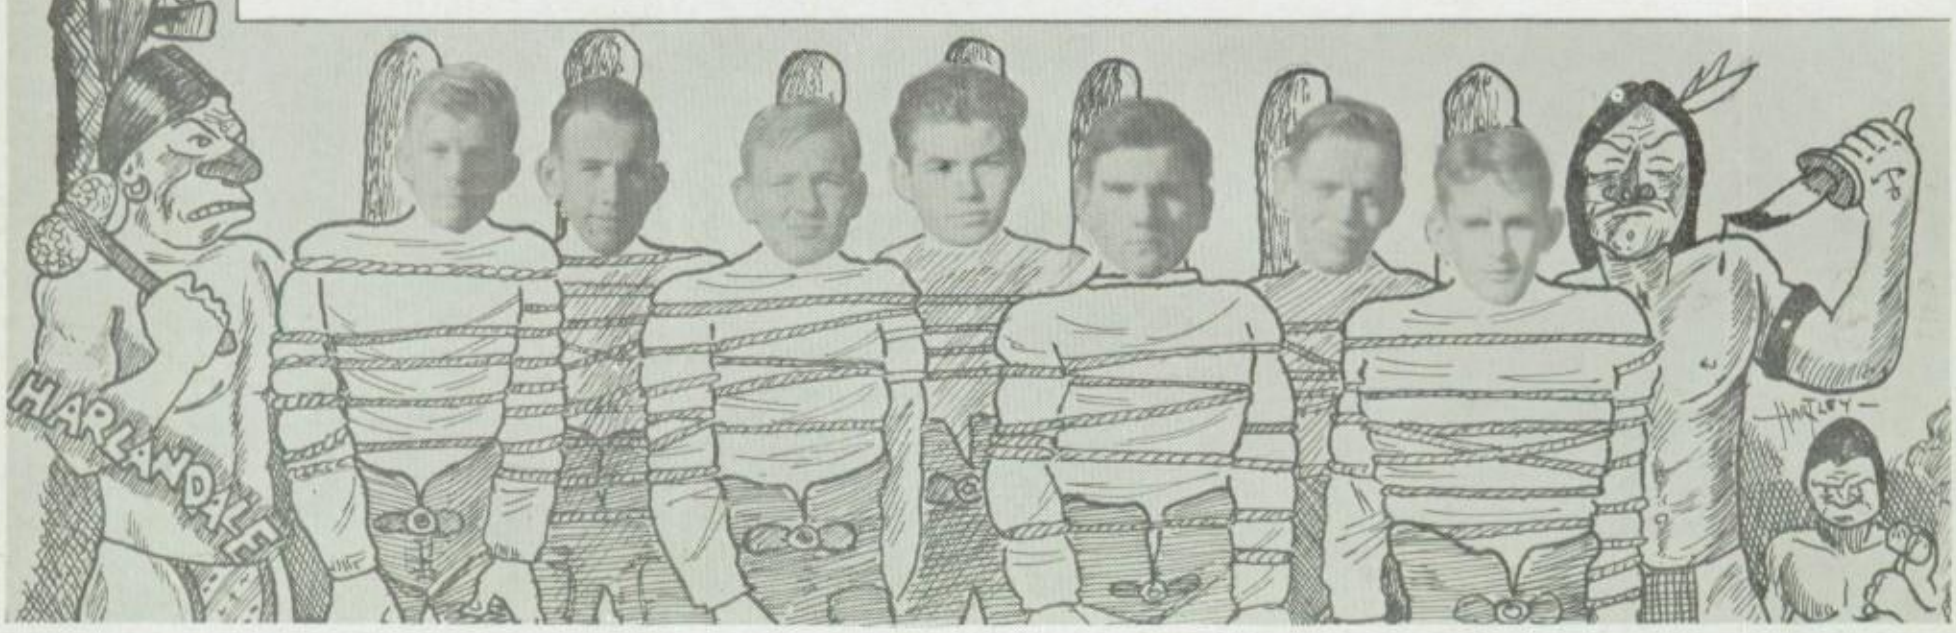
The Maroons were defeated 44 to 0 in their first district clash by the Jefferson High Mustangs. The untiring efforts of Leighton Tenny, Morris Basey, Carroll Gustafson, Ed Bishop, and Bremond Sunday, Maroon linemen, failed to stop the well-drilled set of Mustang warriors.

Coach Strickland had a wide gap to fill when Bremond Sunday was taken out for the rest of the season due to an injury which he received during practice.

Stunned by the outcome of their game with the Mustangs, the gloomy Maroon eleven resumed their football warfare against the Kerrville High Antlers. With the aid of a tricky aerial offense, the Antlers just did overcome the onslaught of the maddened Crimson warriors with a 12 to 6 victory.

With two district defeats upon their over-laden shoulders, the title-seeking Brackenridge Eagles decided to keep the Maroons locked in the cellar of the District 12 standing and defeated the Redskins 18 to 0 between the intermittent showers of a driving rain, as the gridiron war in District 12 reached a bitter climax.



The Harlandale Indians whooped a battle cry and ripped the Maroon ranks for a 6 to 0 victory.

Austin High closed its season with a heart-breaking 19 to 12 loss at the benefit of the Main Tech Buffaloes.

Jimmie Parsley, halfback, during the latter part of the season turned out to be a triple-threater.

Walter Fritsch got plenty of experience during the 1933 season. He may be the potential successor to the once famous Maroon fullback, Buck Friedman.

Woodrow Banner, Richard Riley, and Kirven Fields played a large part in Austin's offense strategy.

Responsible for a large number of overhead and running thrusts was Archie Ray, hefty halfback. He became ineligible later in the season.

Estil Meacham, at quarterback, kept all of the cogs working smoothly in the Maroon machine. As the games progressed, Meacham inherited most of the signal-calling duties of the squad.

Another halfback with plenty of punch and one who possessed plenty of blocking ability was Gus Bowman.

The services of Jesse Jones, Bailey Moore, Roy Tronrud, John Shane, and Fred Looke were well applied, and they helped a great deal in saving the Maroons from complete disaster.

James Word, Howard Adcock, and John Atkinson received berths on the squad after they had done some outstanding work with the Goldenshirts. These lads attracted unexpected attention; and with the exception of Atkinson, they will most likely be included on the 1934 roster.

BUDDY BOGGS
"I should be promoted to football captain."

1934 BASKETBALL

Ten victories and thirteen defeats were marked on the records of the 1934 Maroon basketball squad.

Bennie Strickland's lads were practically all inexperienced, and keen competition set them back early in the state race.

The 1933 district champions never gave up the hope of winning another district title, but they were finally snuffed out of the race by the Temple High Wildcats.

Bob Butler, fast and tall forward, led the team in high point honors with 96 points to his credit. Playing in 15 games, this stalwart lad kept ahead of his nearest teammate by 30 points. During the latter part of the season Butler was in his best form. In a game against the Southwestern Freshmen, he looped the basket for 17 points, and he rolled 16 points through the hoop in a squabble with San Saba. Incidentally, this was the record for the most points scored in one game.

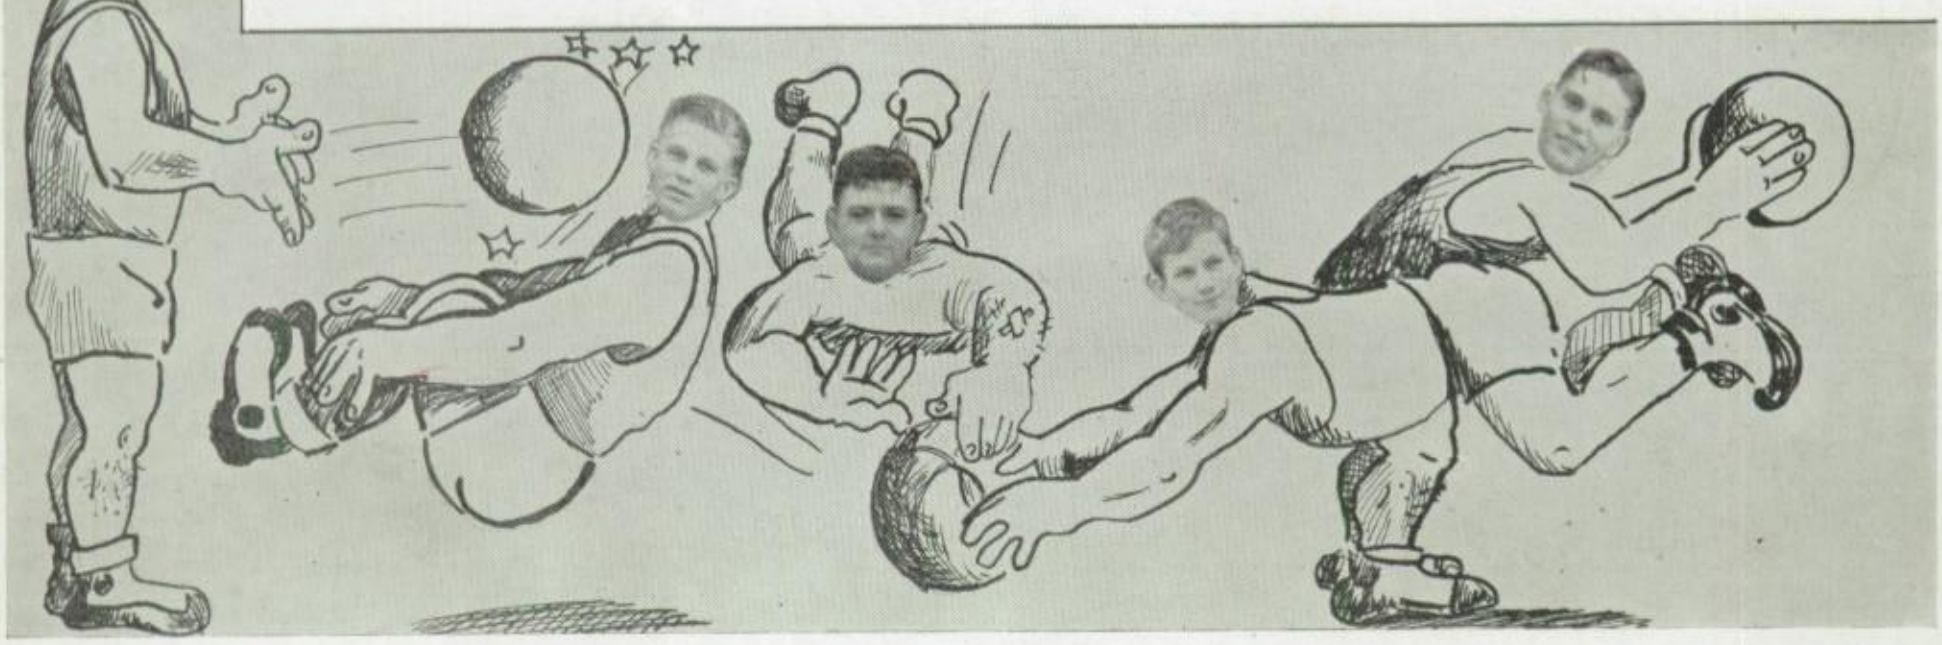
C. J. Niederauer seemed to be an all-around man on the squad. He was fairly consistent during the 19 games in which he played, and usually he was good for at least six or seven points in one game. He fought his way to second place on the high point list with 66 points on his card.

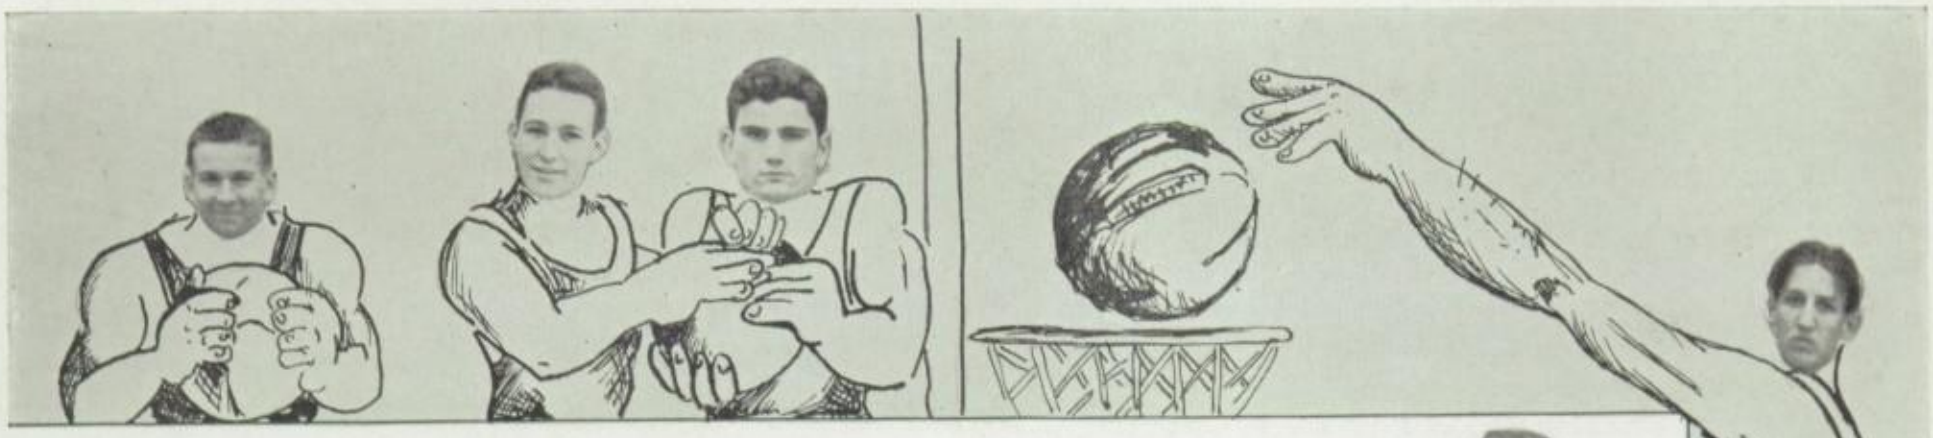
ESTIL MEACHEM
"My goodness, now more worlds to conquer."

Estil Meacham played mostly at guard, and throughout the season a total of 31 personal fouls were registered against him, which seemed to have been quite a record. But in spite of all this, he contributed a total of 55 points to the season's record. Being able to run like a deer and jump like a panther, this spirited Maroon hoop artist was the mainstay of the Crimson defense.

George Wells, a fast and accurate forward, hit the basket for a total of 49 points. In time of need this lad was always ready to step into any tired teammate's position and form part of a strong offensive machine. In a game against Buda he chalked up a total of 12 points and in several other games throughout the season he steadily shot as high as ten points.

Ray Grasty, another sparkplug of the Maroon offense, played in 19 games and hit the basket for a total of 44 points. In a game against San Saba his eye for the hoop was most accurate, as he shot 14 points before he was finally taken out.





Murray Smith, holding down the pivot-post, became ineligible at the end of the fall semester. He was a great loss to Bennie Strickland's crew, for he totaled 38 points in nine of the games he played. Smith was a sort of rough and tumble type of basketeer, for he was removed from four different games on account of having too many personal fouls registered against him.

Hiram Elliott and Martin Butler ran a fairly close race. These two boys ran circles around their opposition, and they were both valuable assets to the squad. Elliott had 28 points to his credit, and Butler hit the loop for 26 points.

Walter Fritsch, center, acquired his fame in the latter part of the season. He paraded the court like a tree-topping giant and easily looped 25 points in 12 games.

Jimmie Parsley as a guard shot quite a few goals for the Maroons. He shot a total of 23 points, and his unusual smooth rhythmic movements made him one of the best men on the team.

Kirven Fields, fast and lanky center, shot the same range as Parsley. He had a good eye for the basket and also contributed his share on the defense.

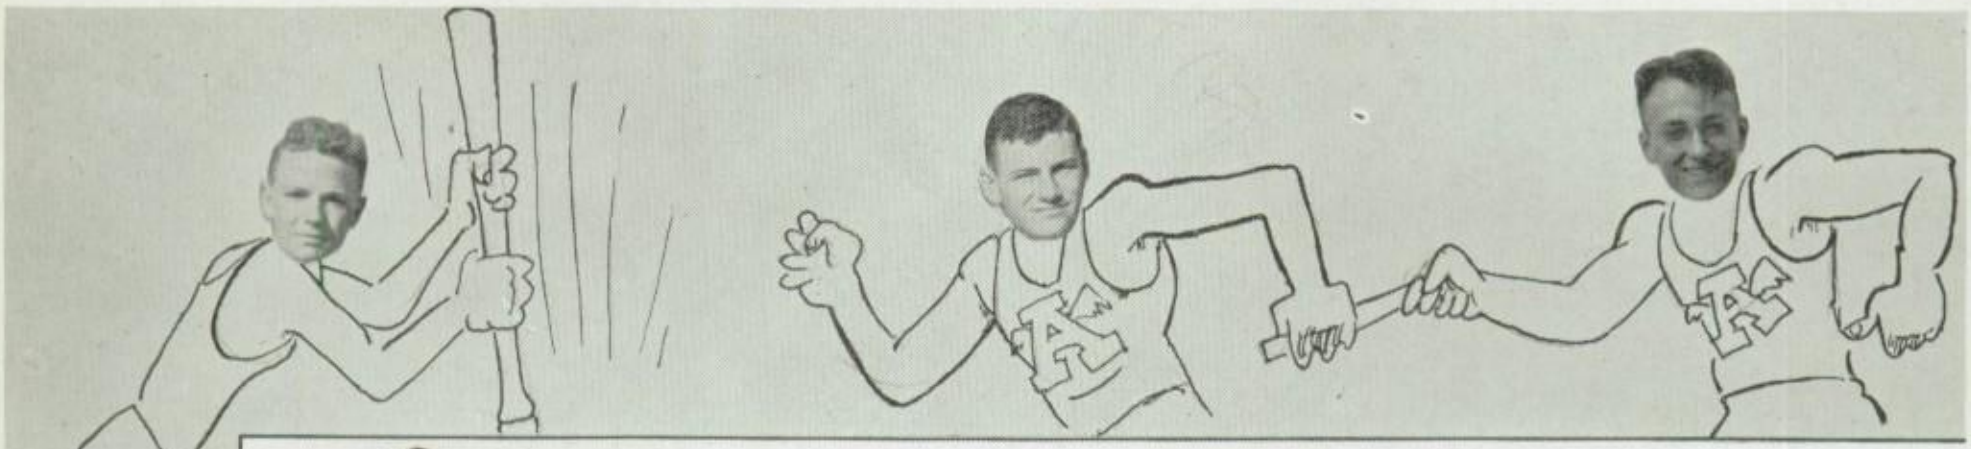
Billy Bob O'Connell, Richard Riley, Lawrence Skelley, Charles Petit, George Metzenthin, Fred Looke, Leonard Baker, Rea Tenney, Bill Cousins, Harry Williams, D. W. Lovelady, and Logan Wood, composed the B squad. Riley and Skelley were used in several of the faster games, while the others played one or two games with lesser opposition.

The Maroons of this year tallied 569 points against their opponents' 553. The 1933 squad recorded 484 points or 25 points per game, while this year's squad averaged 23 points per game.

The games being played during the noon roll section period was a new plan of the athletic officials. Indications show that it turned out to be highly successful.

C. J. NIEDERAUER
"He plays basketball and smiles at the fair ones."

All in all, the 1934 Maroons, although they were defeated in the district play-off by Temple, had a rather good season, and Austin High should be very proud of their work.



WILLIAM KUHN
"Sparkling eyes are his weakness."

TRACK

Coach Johnny Keel and his Austin High track squad circled the cinders for one of the most successful track seasons in years. The enthusiasm for track and field has been unusually widespread this year, and the boys showed some well-trained ability.

The team as a whole took more first places than ever before, and they proved to be a fast bunch of pace-makers. At the time of writing, their outstanding performances give them an equal chance with the contestants in the district and state meets.

Woodrow Jones skipped the hurdles for the Maroon this year. His opponents had fits when this dust-spitting lad came down the lanes like a human bullet. Against Taylor in the 120-yard hurdles, and in meets against Bastrop and the Texas Military Institute of San Antonio, Jones chalked up a bushel of points.

Harry Williams was an all-around performer and about as valuable to the squad as water in a desert. He brought home records that were new and bright. Besides dashing recklessly down the cinders, he was usually to be found in the field of high and broad jumping. He won the broad jump event in three successive meets. That boy could hop farther than any kangaroo ever hopes to hop. Great work is expected of him in interscholastic competition.

John Atkinson has a good chance to win the 440-yard dash in the district meet. He is a fast runner who is hard to beat.

Like a raging tornado, Ovie Cloud usually raced down the track with full speed ahead, and he won for the Maroons many dash events. As the tornado leaves destruction in its wake, Cloud left the foes in his own dust.

Then, another dash man shows speed. Some say that this lanky sprinter has the advantages of gilded wings, but that is another story. His name is, as known in track circles, Jim Kriesle. He came through with several first places and numerous second places in the 440-yard dashes.

When we take another peep into the events of the field, we find big Ed Bishop majestically wielding the heavy lead sphere and the weighty discus. He came through with first place honors in both the shot put and discus throw events in the first three meets.

And here we have the high school's greatest vocal trust, Joseph B. Baldwin, and newcomer to the gang. This year is his first year out, and a very good miler he is indeed.

One often sees a person make good in work and play. Tom Law, a mile runner, is truly successful in that field of play. He is also a new man on the squad, and it did not take him very long to get acquainted with its foregoings.

An interesting fact that happened during the earlier part of the season was that Law and Baldwin while engaging invading tracksters in the mile run event usually had the track to themselves, and the interest shifted to inter-squad competition.

Of the hardest race in the whole track events, the 880-yard dash perhaps takes the prize. Alfred Rios, tall and lean dash man, runs it like a mythodical nymph. He has the makings of a real track man, and some day he may be the king of them all.

In the 220-yard dash, T. Z. Evans was usually to be found. A fast runner that lad was, and his work was nothing less than outstanding.

Francis Reissig, 880-yard dash man, was also a valuable asset to the 1934 squad, and together with Rios, the Maroons were hard to beat in that event.

Young and alert Bill Whittle likes to sail through the air. He would make a good aviator, for he is a good pole vaulter and high jumper. Whittle has been victorious in several meets and it is expected that he will put up a good show.

John Montgomery's favorite hobby must be to run dashes. In several meets he was the first man to cross the finish line, and naturally, that chalked up much-needed points.

Jack Pence may be classed as an 880-yard artist. His work, although not so outstanding, was well done. The same may be said for Harper Green, who with a little more training will be a sure-shot track ace.

Murray Yantis, William Kuhn, and James Anderson are all mile runners, and Coach Keel has this lot to pick from when he chooses his men. They can give competing mile runners a heated race.

HARRY WILLIAMS
"And fast and fleet,
And large were his feet."

The relay team was rated as one of the best in this section of the State. It is composed of Alfred Rios, Harry Williams, Jim Kriesle, and Francis Reissig.

We must take this time and space and devote it to the track team's faithful and hustling manager, your honor, Mr. Robert Abadie.

EDGAR WELLER

TENNIS

With Tom Holland, veteran Austin tennis coach, back, the Austin High School netters have again upheld their long prestige in tennis circles. Uncle Tom, as he is known to his friends, produced a well-drilled and organized team which time and again has brought victory to Austin High.

Four ranking tennis teams of other high schools over the state went down in defeat at the hands of the Austin team, the Maroons winning 53 out of the 72 sets played.

In the first game of the season, Thomas Jefferson of San Antonio lost to the Austin racqueteers by a score of 9 to 3. The games were played on the Austin Athletic courts. Again the San Antonio team was defeated to the tune of 8 to 4, the matches being played in San Antonio.

Alamo Heights of San Antonio dropped 7 matches to Austin here, winning only 2 for themselves.

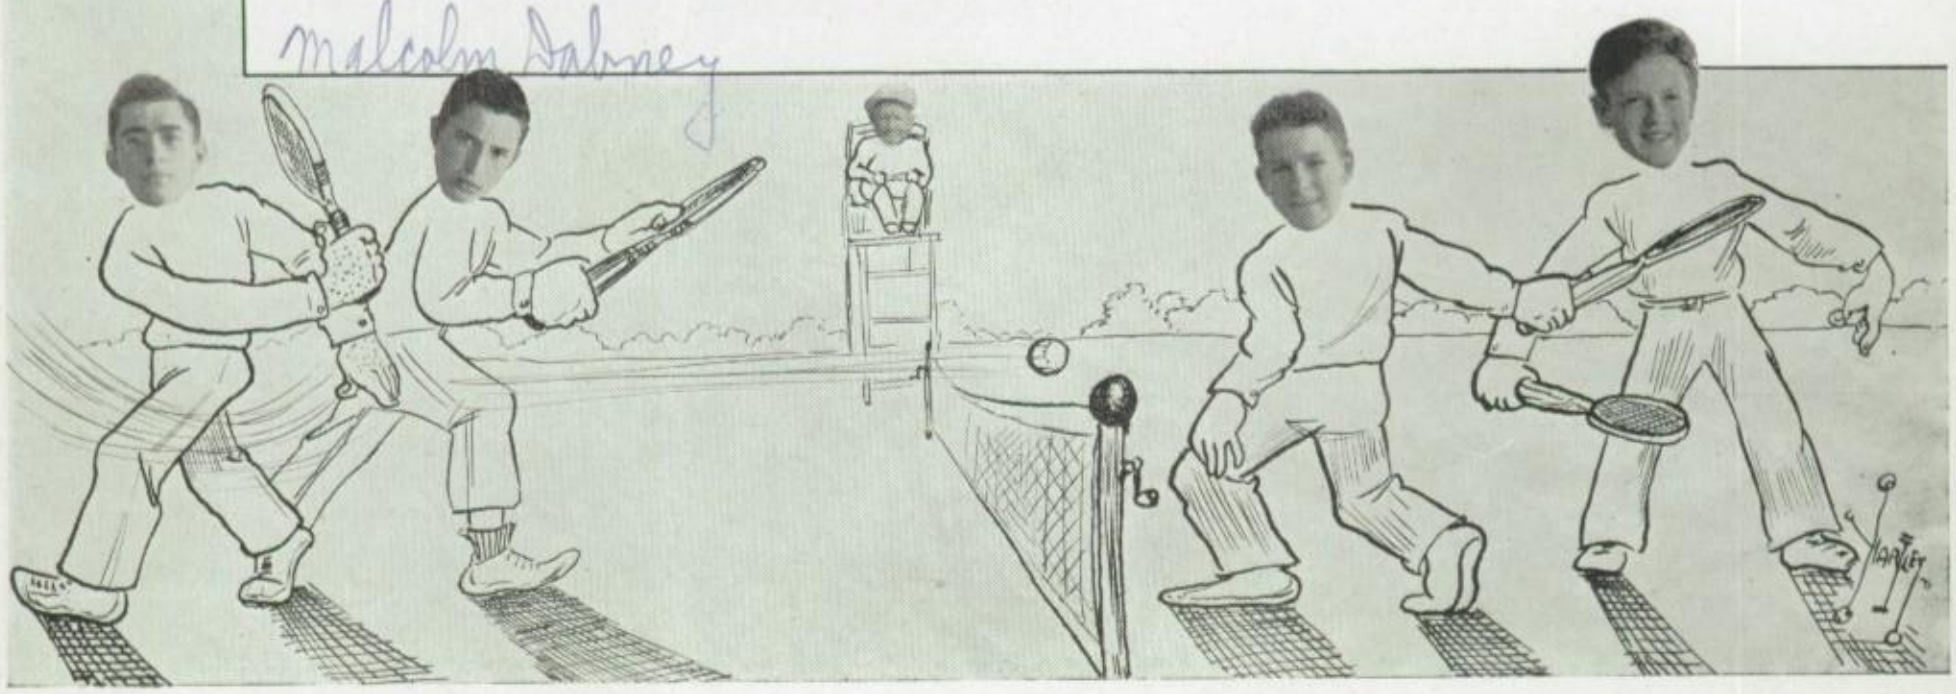
The Austin team then took to the road, playing matches in Houston and Galveston. The San Jacinto High Team of Houston bowed to Austin with a score of 2 compared to Austin's 7. Ball High School then fell victim to the Maroon netters with a score of 8 to 2.

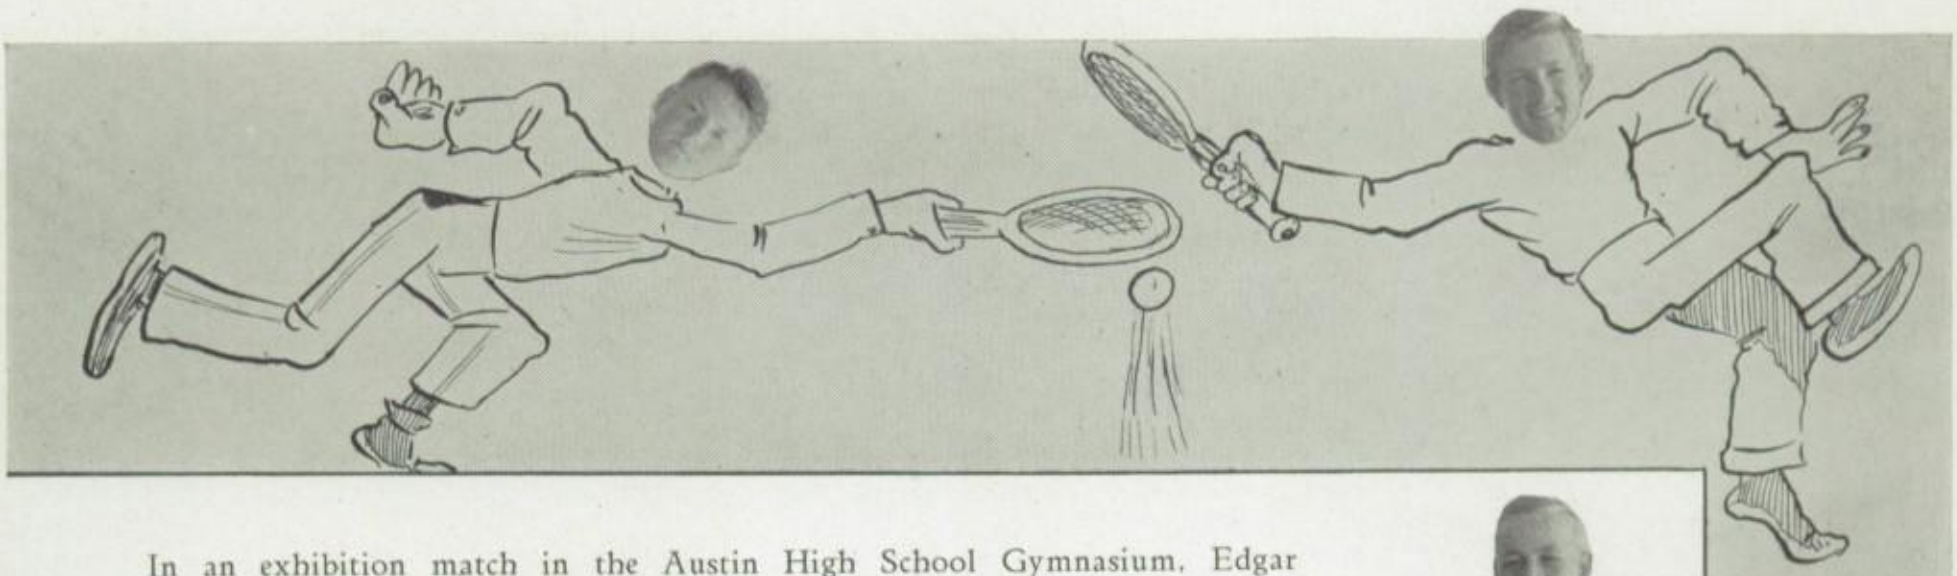
San Jacinto then played a return match here and again lost to a strong Austin team. The score was 7 to 3. Ball High was played here and Austin came out on top of a 7 to 3 score.

Summing up the season, Uncle Tom pointed out the development of the team members. A good number of new recruits reported for workouts, but the future of the team does not look so bright. The first seven ranking players will be lost through graduation or ineligibility.

In talking of the prospects for next year, Uncle Tom suggested Joe Bowles and Chester Granville as being of high calibre. "Joe is very consistent in his practice," according to Uncle Tom, "and I can always depend on him." In talking of Chester, he said that his game was vastly improving. Other men that will prove valuable next year to all appearances are Ellwood Griscom and several recruits from Allan and University High.

Malcolm Dabney





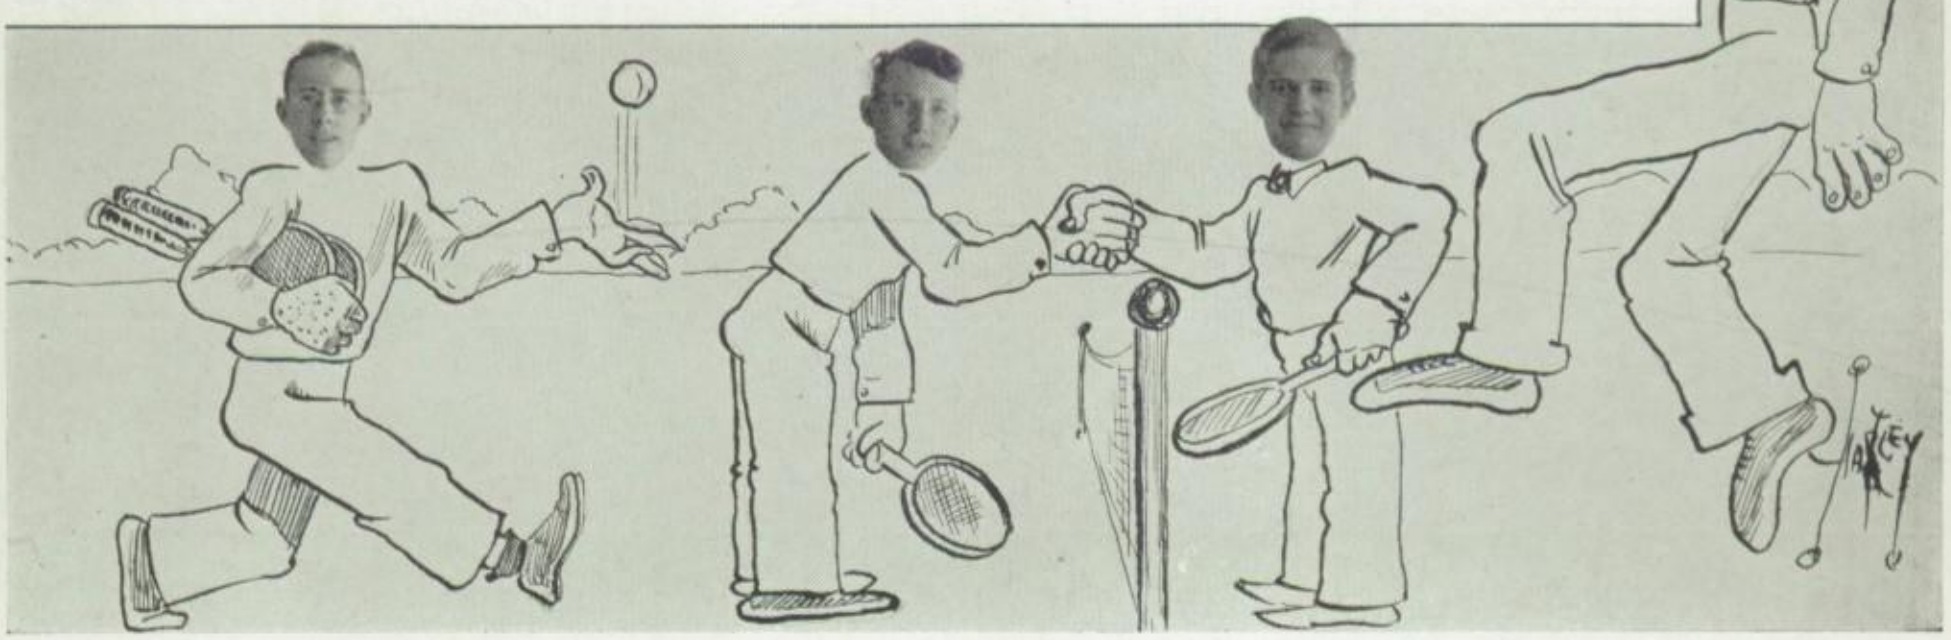
In an exhibition match in the Austin High School Gymnasium, Edgar Waller and George Wells won over Bobby Kamrath and Bobby McGinnis in a game during the noon advisory period. It was a very close match, Wells and Waller finally forging ahead. The match was refereed by Grady Gray, ex-netter of the Austin team.

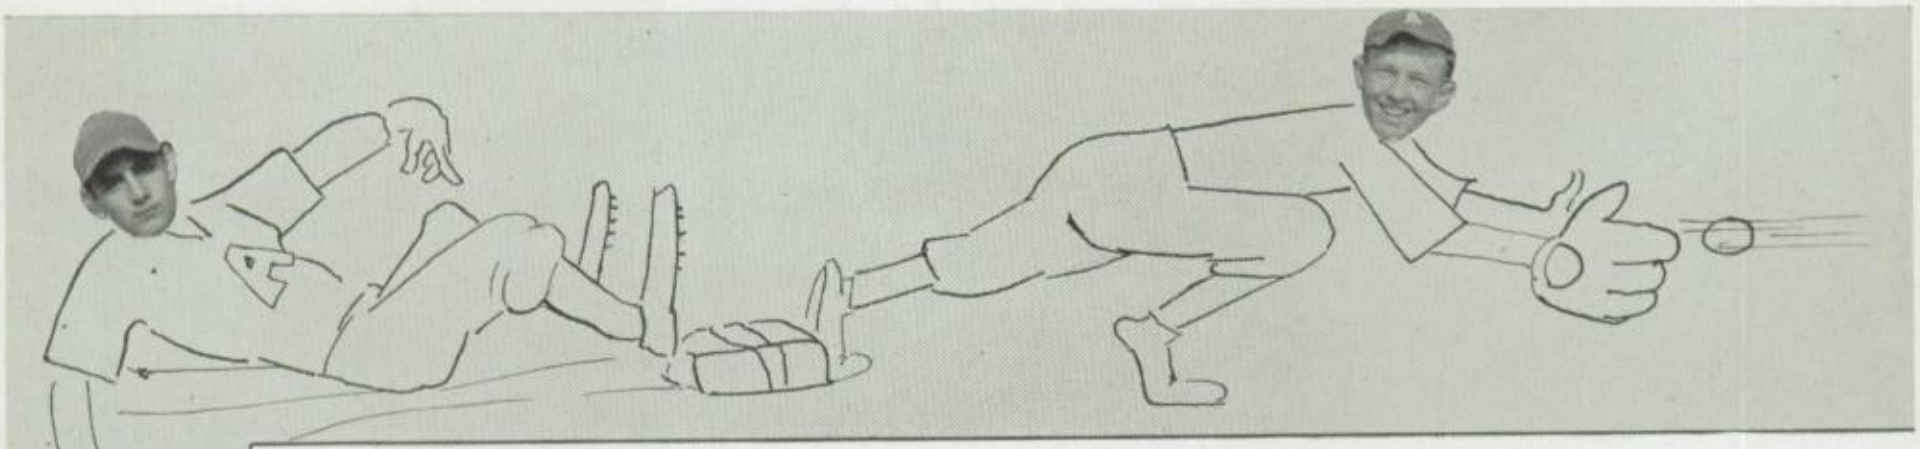
In an assembly, the entire tennis team was presented to the students; and Edgar Weller, captain of the team, and Coach Holland spoke. Uncle Tom urged all students interested in tennis to report to him at the Austin Athletic Club and said that he would appreciate it greatly.

The first eight ranking players on the Austin High Tennis Team are as follows:

1. Bobby Kamrath is Austin's first ranking player. Great rivalry has been manifested between Bobby and Edgar Weller, second in rank. Bobby succeeded in beating Edgar before the District Meet and therefore gained the right to enter tennis singles. Kamrath is a veteran tennis player, holding several out-of state titles in junior singles.
2. Edgar Weller ranks second on the team. He is captain of the team, and one of its most dependable players. Being a senior, his loss will be felt by next year's team. According to Uncle Tom, Edgar is a consistent player and is able to hold up remarkably under any circumstances. Edgar, together with Bobby, played doubles in the District Meet.
3. Robert McGinnis is third in rank for the Austin netters. Although he is rather small, his height does not hinder his invariably good game. Uncle Tom says of Bobby that "He is one of the most 'out-fightinist' boys on the team. He just stays in there and pitches, and we can depend on him to 'bring home the bacon'."
4. Ernest Villavaso is the fourth ranking player on the team. The ranking list is constantly changing between Ernest and the next three ranking players. They are about equal in their games, each man being dependable to put up a good game.
5. George Wells ranks fifth on the team. George was fourth ranking player until just a few days before this report but dropped to fifth place after he had defeated Ernest Villavaso. A player's ranking is determined by his challenging to play the next ranking player a challenge match. If he is successful, the places are interchanged, and if the challenger is unsuccessful, he keeps his present status.
6. Bachman Bedichek is sixth ranking player for the Maroons. His height adds to his power, and his game is rather steady.
7. Walter Fisher ranks seventh, but Uncle Tom predicts a bright future for him. He says that, "Walter is taking wonderful strides, and as soon as he settles down to his game more, I expect good results."
8. Marlin King is the eighth ranking member of the team. Marlin will be the only remaining member of the team out of the first ranking eight players. In speaking of him, the coach says, "Marlin has shown the most improvement of any one of the team."

BOBBY KAMRATH
"Mama's big little boy in pusson."





BASEBALL

C. J. NIEDERAUER
"His merriness goes all day."

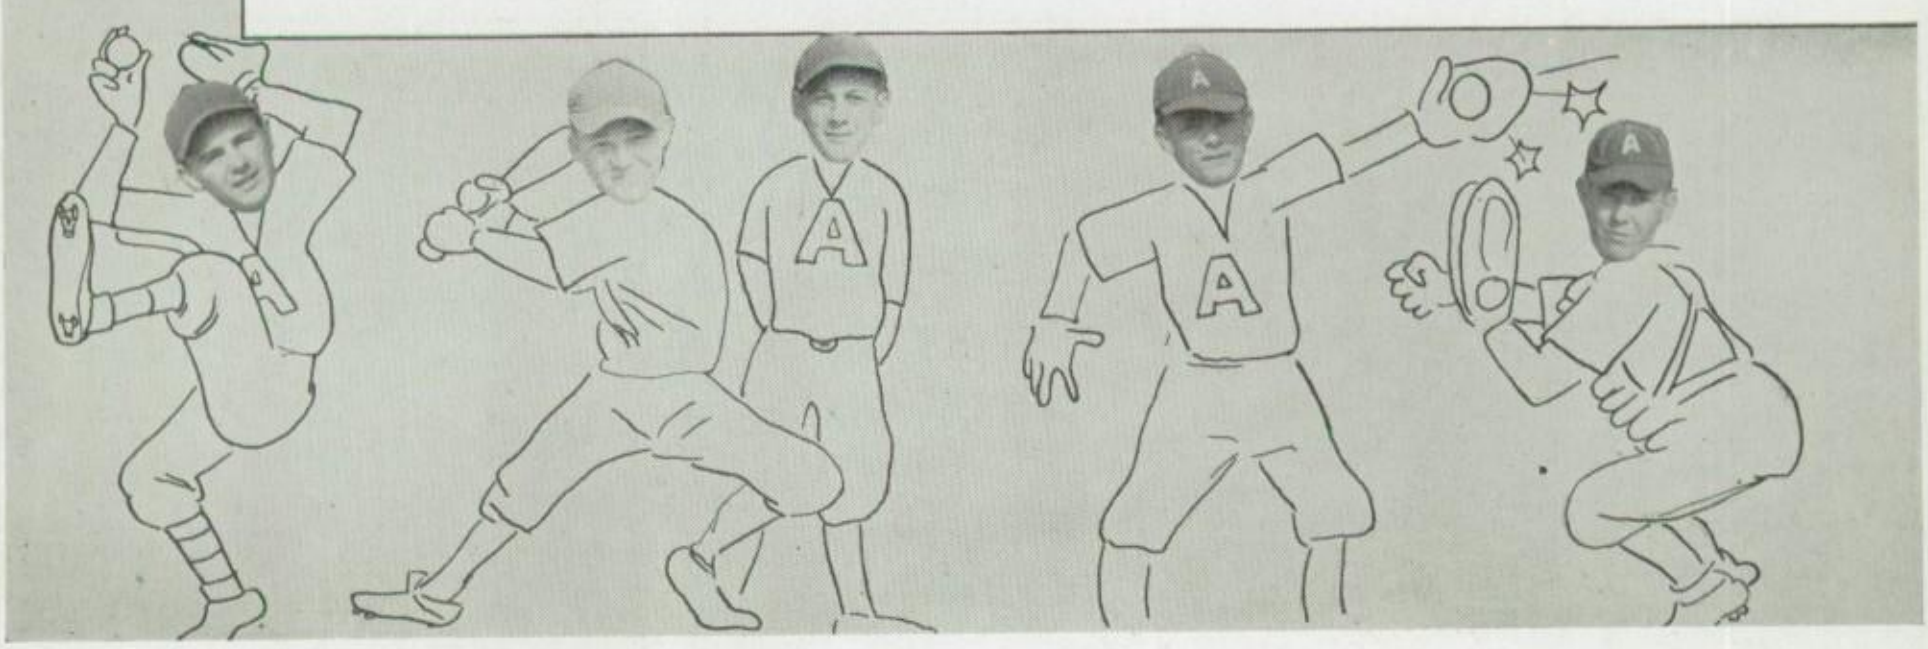
Coach Bennie Strickland and his Austin High Baseball team have kept the old-time pace aglow. This is the Maroon's second year under the guidance of Coach Strickland, and they put up as clean a fight as any other team in the State.

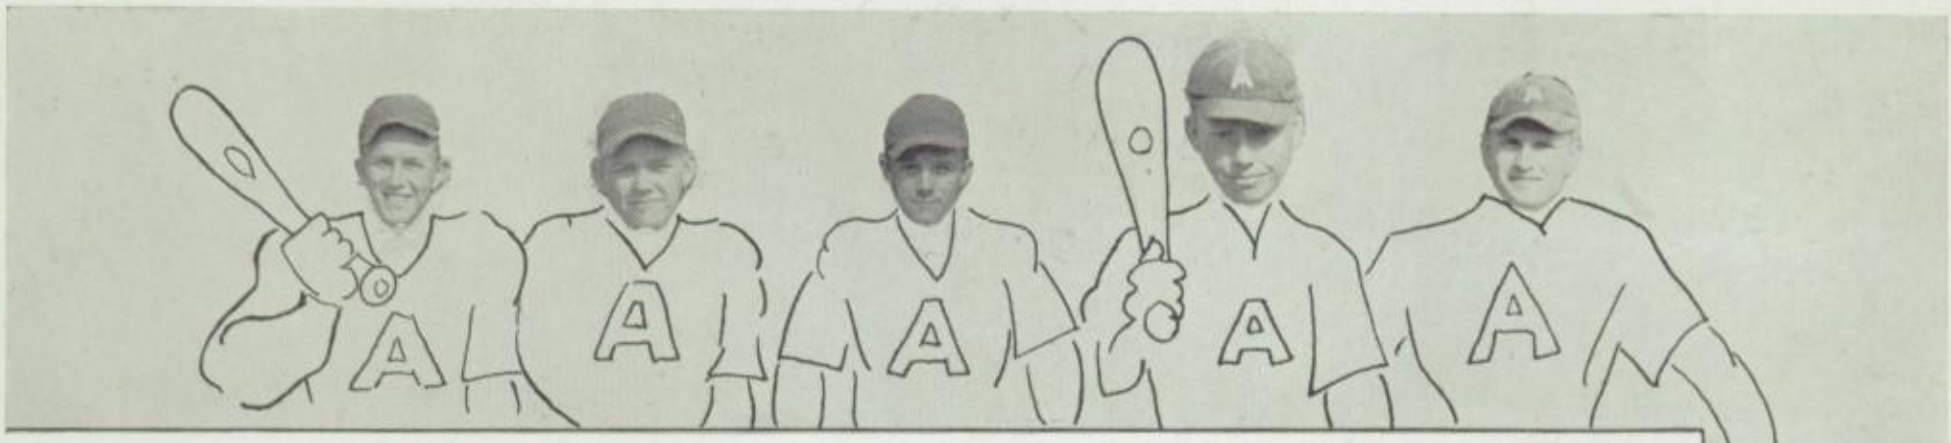
Many of the former Maroon baseball stars are now playing in professional ranks, and there are more to come from this year's Maroon crop.

Baseball in Austin High has never met with any approval from the student body. The team has always more or less gone on its own hook. The men who made the team sought no glory in the school they so nobly represented, but they put forth every effort they had in order to keep up the grand records that preceded them. They were trained quickly and easily, and as a result the boys who won their letters have a swell chance at professional ball.

This year, indications show that Coach Strickland will have a hard-hitting and ground-covering outfield, with some of the heaviest sluggers in years. The Maroons' fielding percentages have always been high, and the boys on this year's squad will have to do some tall playing to keep up the records of the past. The Maroon mentor has about eight good men to choose his outfielders from and among them are two of last year's lettermen.

In the infield there are a lot of wide gaps to be filled from new and inexperienced men. The only youngster with any experience at all came from last summer's Junior Baseball League.





We take the liberty to say that the Junior League has helped the Maroon baseball coaches more than once. Hundreds of Austin youngsters play in this league every summer; it is under the supervision of Harvey S. Williams, former baseball mentor of Austin High. Records show that since the organization of the Junior League almost every man that has ever earned a berth on the Maroon nine has at some time or other played in the summer leagues.

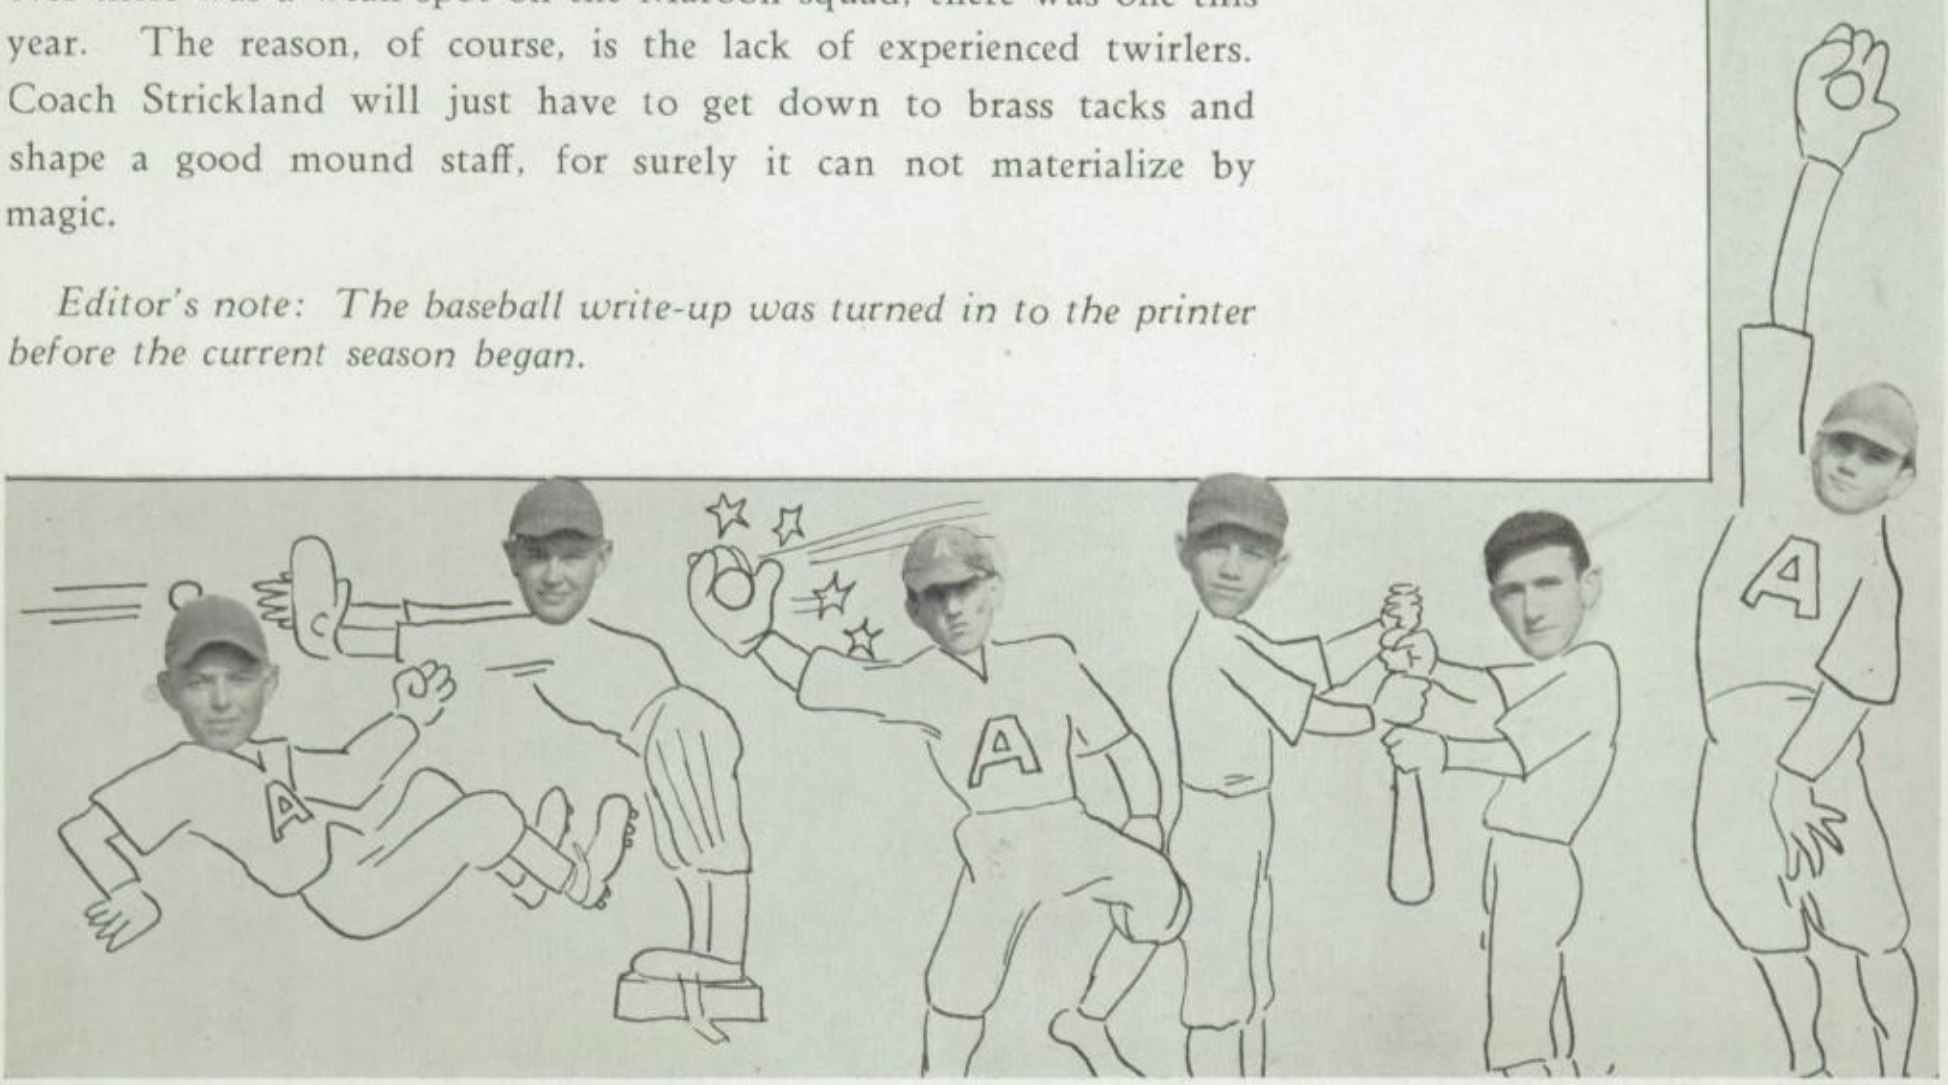
With this in mind we must remember that Coach Strickland probably will finish the season with a crackerjack infield, because he will be able to find some boys that at least know what a baseball looks like.

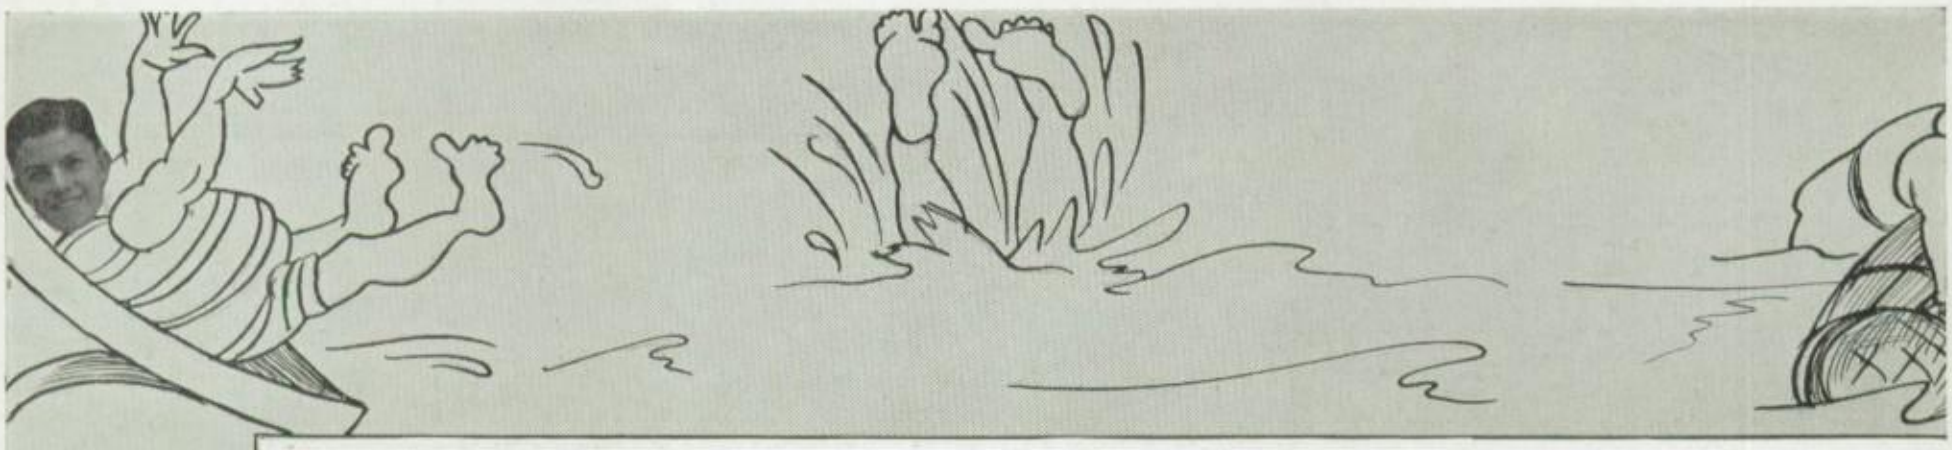
Two or three good candidates are out for the catching job. This position has always been a hard one to fill, and this year it will prove even harder without a seasoned veteran.

Last but not least comes the selection of the pitching staff. If ever there was a weak spot on the Maroon squad, there was one this year. The reason, of course, is the lack of experienced twirlers. Coach Strickland will just have to get down to brass tacks and shape a good mound staff, for surely it can not materialize by magic.

Editor's note: The baseball write-up was turned in to the printer before the current season began.

HIRAM ELLIOT
"The great Napoleon had nothing on him."





SWIMMING

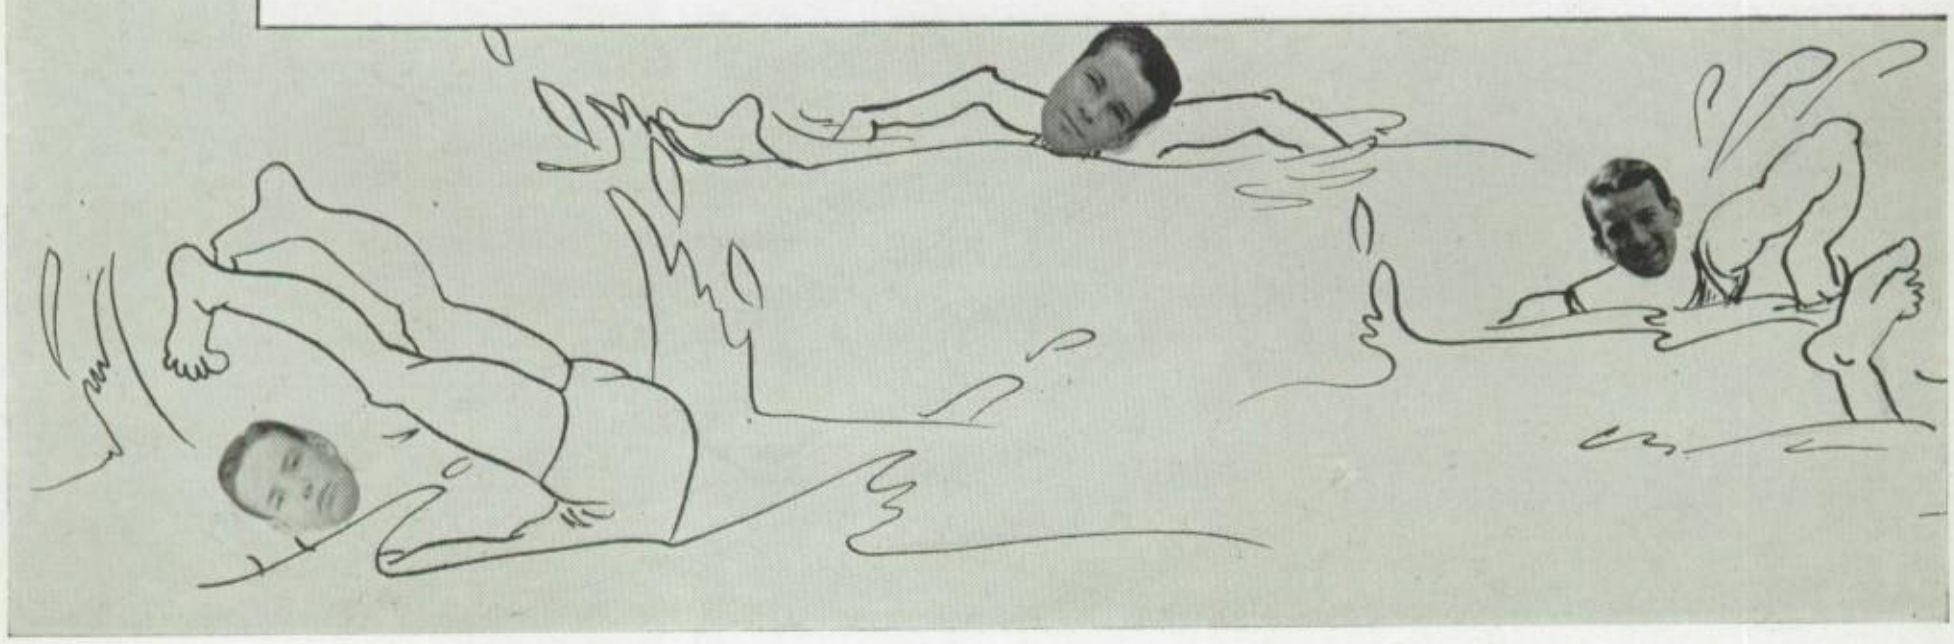
Coach Johnny Keel also had charge of Austin High's tankmen, and he turned out a mighty good swimming team. They could give any high school in Texas some real competition.

The swimming team, like the baseball team, usually does not get much recognition. The boys work hard to make the team and after they do they never are given much credit for it. They didn't like the idea of any other high school saying that Austin High cannot rally a swimming team, and because of it, they defeated teams like the Jefferson High Mustangs and the Brackenridge Eagles, besides various other high school teams.

The boys that were on the team deserve every honor given to them. They have been swimming consistently in competing meets ever since they were in grammar school. It takes a good man with plenty of practice to be a good swimmer, and good swimmers they are.

Lawrence Skelley and Warren Smith did most of the backstroke swimming for the Crimson boys. They were victorious in competition even as keen as that of the University of Texas Freshmen.

In breaststroke swimming, David Lewis and Henry Wilson were both outstanding. They won many events for the Maroons and to them goes the honor of defeating Austin High's most hated and feared rivals.



Tom Law, John Keough, Prentis Perry, Tom Taylor, and Ray Grasty were all swimming free style. Besides their good work on the tank team, Grasty and Law had already become popular as members of the basketball and track teams, respectively.

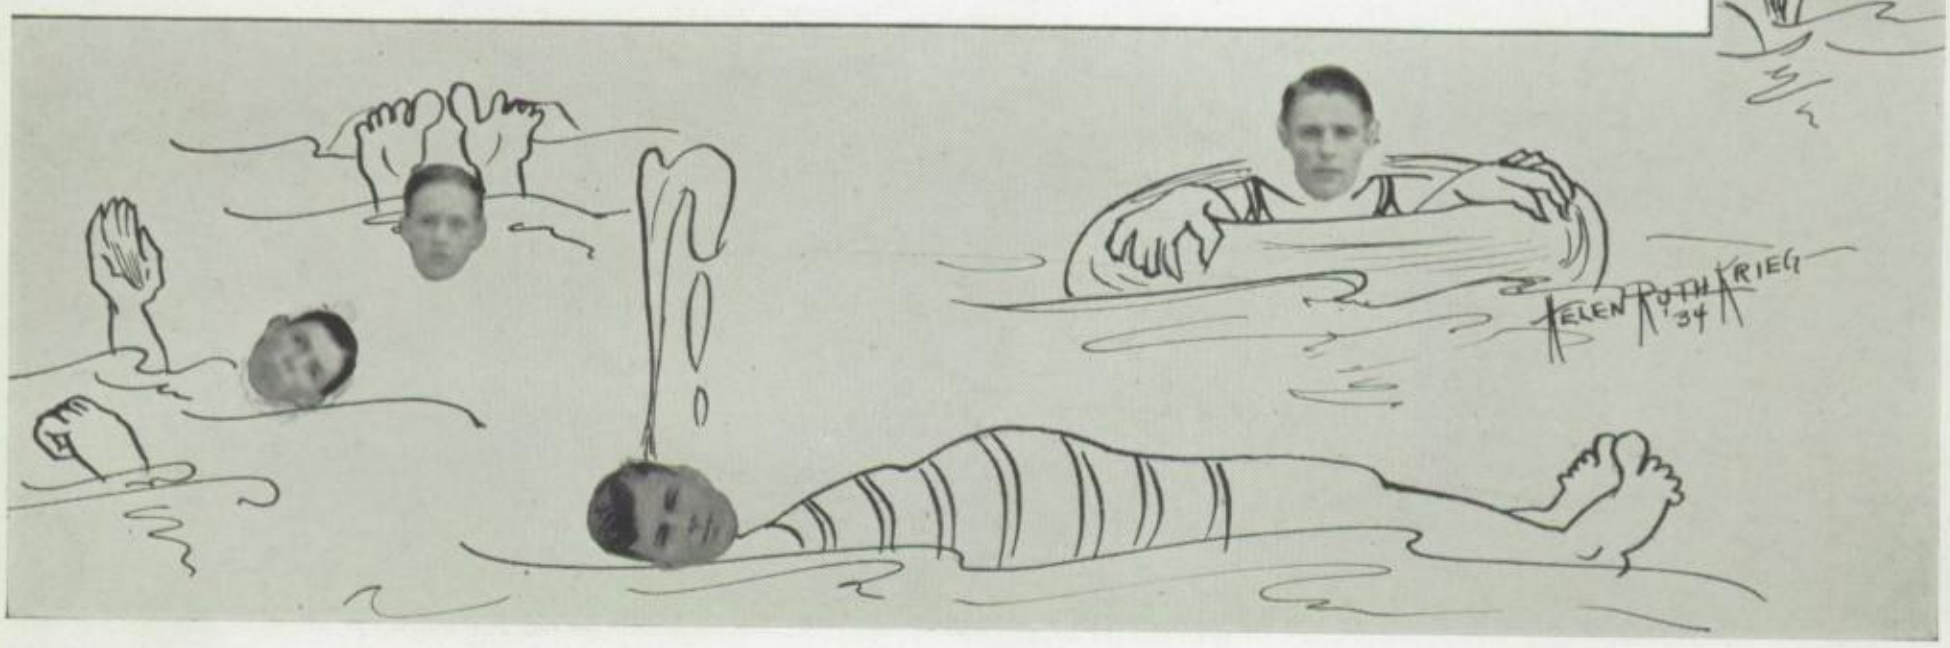
The hardest race of them all is the 400-yard dash, and it was assigned to the young but enduring Jimmy Farrell. If anyone could swim that race, he could. A better man than Farrell was hardly available, and no other was needed to represent Austin High in that division.

James Terrell was the only man entered in the diving division. When it came to any sort of diving contest, hither or thither, he was always at hand. And that is what won him the job as diver on the Maroon squad. The old saying "practice makes perfect," is certainly true in this case.

Skelley and Grasty were lettermen of last year's team. Smith has been on the squad for three successive years and lots of the Maroon victories in the backstroke events have been credited to him.

Some of the men on the squad will probably be back next year and their excellent work of the past year should stimulate enough interest in swimming to put a good Austin High team on the Texas map.

Leonard Baker, Harry Wilcox, and Gordon Groos also made themselves available. Without the services of these three men, Coach Keel would have been utterly lost.



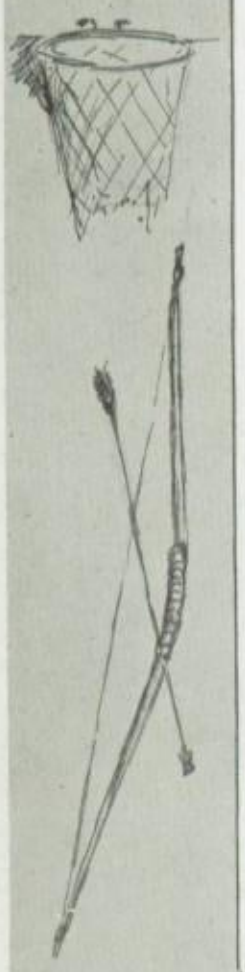
ARCHERY

William Tell had nothing on some of Austin High's girls, so they tell, because archery was given two days a week during the first six weeks of the fall semester. Both the beginning and advanced students were taught the sport.

Each class was divided into individual squads according to the height of the girls. The games were played on the south-east grounds of House Park.

In a regular game, each girl is allowed three shots. They stand from 30 to 50 feet away from the target, which allows five scores. The center ring, which is known as the "Bull's Eye," counts nine; the next and succeeding rings count seven, five, three, and one, respectively. If the arrows strike the target but fall to the ground, they count five points regardless of the ring in which they hit.

Every day that archery was taught, the scores of each girl were taken, and at the end of the six weeks period, the totals were made. Then came the big event, for the girls having the highest scores competed in a tournament.



HOCKEY

If you wondered why some girls were going around during the second six weeks of the fall term rubbing their shins and nursing sore legs, the reason is that Field Hockey was taught two days a week during that period.

The classes were divided into teams composed of eleven players. Each member of the teams was assigned a position as either one of the five on the forward line, one of the three half-backs, one of the two full-backs, or the goal-keeper.

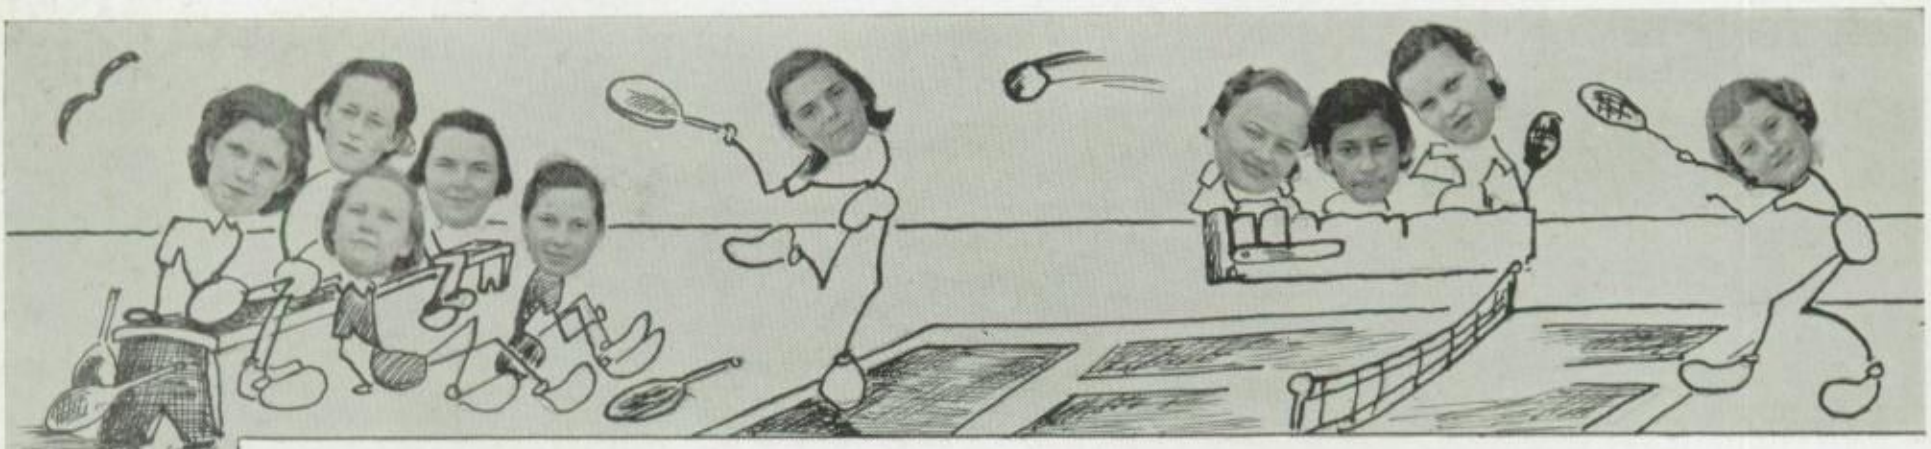
The game is similar to soccer, but is played with a curved stick and a small ball. A point is scored when the ball is knocked between the goal posts.

BASKETBALL

Basketball was played the third six weeks of the fall term and the first six weeks in the spring term. Each team was composed of six girls: two forwards, two guards, and two centers.

For those unaccustomed to viewing girls' basketball games, the game will appear different to the boys' basketball. Yet, they are very similar, incorporating the same technique. The primary difference is that the court is divided into three equal sections, each division restricting four girls. A score of two is awarded for a goal.

Great interest was shown in the girls' basketball tourney in the spring term. The game as taught in the Physical Training classes was played in the contest, thus making it fast and interesting.



TENNIS

Tennis wasn ot included in the courses offered by the Physical Training Department but was taught through the Tennis Club. The club, which has Miss Winifred Smylie as its sponsor, met in the Gymnasium after school for an hour each Tuesday. During this period, the fundamental strokes were taught. Practice was held on the playground courts most convenient to the individual players.

The Tennis Club sent to the District Meet in Georgetown Laurie Simmons as the singles player and Elva Baker and Joyce Burdett in the doubles.

Next year, the team will lose its singles players, but the doubles players will be back. Miss Smylie named besides the returning players, Elizabeth Eckert and Eddie Lou Callan as good material for next year.

TUMBLING

Tumbling was taught once a week to both beginning and advanced students. It is a simplified form of gymnastics. The classes were divided into pairs and such stunts as the "Neck Stand," the "Shuttle," the "Eskimo Roll," "the Stagger Step," and the "Wheelbarrow," were performed.

A group of tumblers from the classes under the direction of Miss Winifred Smylie, gave a performance for a meeting of the Austin High School Parent-Teachers' Association.

The final tournament in tumbling is held each spring, with the 12 best tumblers taking part.

DANCING

One of the most interesting parts of the Physical Training course, according to the majority of girls, was tapping. It was taught twice a week during the first semester to both beginners and advanced students.

Tapping is similar to clogging and teaches rhythmic movements and agility of group work.

Various dances were taught, such as "Goofus," "Liza Jane," "Arkansas Traveller," "Athletic Line," "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "Reuben Taps," and "Yankee Doodle."

GIRLS' INTRAMURALS

Miss Margaret Kirkner became the head of the Physical Training department after Christmas of 1933. Miss Kirkner points out that the individual clubs took part in conducting Girls' Intramural Contests this spring.

The Girls' Athletic Association sponsored an Inter-Club, Inter-Advisory Basketball tournament. The winners of the contest were the sponsors, the G. A. A. The Austin History Club played second and the Independents number three, third.

The Archery and Tennis clubs sponsored contests for archery and tennis respectively.

Miss Kirkner is planning an extensive Intramural program for next year. Among the sports offered are Volleyball, Basketball, Field ball, Tenniquoits, Archery, Tennis singles and doubles, Baseball, and Hockey. Soccer and Speedball will perhaps be given.

Miss Kirkner is also interested in riding, and expects to develop horseback riding interests next year.

BOYS' INTRAMURALS

Coach John Keel had charge of the Boys' Intramurals for both the Spring and Fall terms, running off eleven events in all.

In the fall term, a great deal of interest was manifested in the Intramural Golf Tournament. There were twenty-one entries into the matches, the race finally settling down to Wilbur Lucksinger, Raymond Dzierzanowski, Johnny Touchstone, and James Kilbourne. In the final match, Lucksinger defeated Touchstone one up on the nineteenth.

Touch and Pass was one of the Intramural sports held in the fall term, with eight teams entering. In a fast game, Touchstone's team defeated the third period P. T. class by a score of 12-6.

Lawrence Skelly won the Free Throw Contest, ringing 34 baskets out of a possible 50. There was a tie for runner-up between William Nabours and Jolly Joe Harkins.

The plan for tennis Intramurals was to offer the single competition in the fall and the doubles contest in the spring. Joe Bowles won the single match in the fall term.

In the spring season, the basketball contest was won by Harkins' Horrible Hungarians, whose captain was Jolly Joe Harkins. Runner-up was Smith's Terrible Swiss. Members of the winning team were Joe Ramsey, Henry Wagner, Otis Terrel, C. T. Sterzing, and Eddie Lloyd.

Golf Intramural entrants went through 18 holes for qualifying matches, the six highest men being members of the Austin High Golf Team. Volley Ball, Indoor Baseball, Boxing, and Tennis doubles were run off later in the season.

Coach Keel is planning another full program for next year's Intramural competitions.

is our watchword. It has guided our activities since we opened in Austin several years ago.

Our best ads are our many friends who have been pleased with our work. Our interest does not cease when we receive your money. Your continued satisfaction is our aim. By this we mean that the portraits we make of you are guaranteed to remain as pretty as they are on the day you receive them. They are carefully made, and will never fade nor stain.
